FDIC Schedules meeting of the Advisory Committee on Community Banking on April 9th: Give Mutual Banks A Voice

The Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation (FDIC) announced today that it will hold a meeting of the Advisory Committee on Community Banking on Wednesday, April 9th at the FDIC headquarters building starting at 8:45 am. Please note that as the FDIC doesn't have a mutual advisory committee, this is the appropriate forum for mutual banks to express their view on issues of special application to them. The meeting is open to the public and will be webcast as well. Further details including the agenda are attached. The last review of the Board composition revealed only one mutual banker sitting on the Board. Thus, it is even more important to express your views from the mutual bank perspective.
